

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A tool for a powered machine, having vibration damping means. A method of providing a tool having a vibration damping member arrangement, applicable to different tools, is described. Estimated antinode positions along the tool in use are determined and a vibration damping member arrangement is located to cover at least one selected antinode position.

5